Architecture

At Hames Sharley we have a fundamental philosophy that good design underpins everything we do. Our objective is to produce visually attractive, expressive and well planned buildings taking into consideration their impact on the natural environment and it's role in satisfying both the functional and economic needs of our clients and users.

A Hames Sharley designed building is a valuable asset because we adopt a rigorous approach to long-term sustainability. Our architects ensure that the buildings we design are efficient in terms of energy and water consumption and are sufficiently flexible to be adapted for different future uses. The buildings we create are dynamic spaces that continue to respond, react and evolve with its occupants and the environment.

We also recognize that every design is unique therefore we take time to ensure that our design responses truly reflect the uniqueness of each project responding to conditions of brief, site and context.
